

Freedom Writing: African American Women's Literacy Activism

- Literacy Activism had only a symbiotic relationship with the Civil Rights Movement.
- Community based African American Women have a tradition of initiating and sustaining critical intellectual strategies for social change
- Civic inclusion was not a primary motive for literacy activism during the civil rights movement.

The project that come out of this text include an examination of the decendants of this literacy crusade.

Rhea Estelle Lathan

Department of English

222F Williams Bldg

rlathan@fsu.edu